Description

The University of Manchester is the UK's largest single-site university, we possess a fantastic breadth and depth of knowledge, we break down barriers to undertake multidisciplinary research, and we collaborate with partners worldwide to tackle some of society's most pressing problems.

The University's aim is to be the partner of choice for companies seeking collaborations in the life sciences, and in realising that ambition, the business development function ensures that the University is easy to do business with.

Offer

Academic expertise at the University of Manchester

We seek collaborations ranging from discrete pieces of work employing skills and technology available within the University, to large scale, strategic research partnerships focused on addressing jointly important challenges in the biomedical sciences. Whatever the scope and scale of the collaboration, the University seeks to deliver important benefits to our partners. This gives us the opportunity to make sure that our research outputs and our know-how can be exploited effectively for wealth creation and improved healthcare.
